ALTERGY'S FREEDOM POWER SYSTEMS ACHIEVE MORE THAN 15 MILLION HOURS OF OPERATION

FOLSOM, California –March 1, 2013~ Alteryg is pleased to announce that its deployed fleet of Freedom Power™ fuel cell systems have surpassed 15 million hours of operation.

Mission critical applications such as telecommunications demand immediate and long lasting reliability. Alteryg's zero emission fuel cell power systems provide clean power at point of use, eliminating the need for batteries and generators to provide the reliability and continuous power that the grid cannot. Uninterruptable power is the key to maintaining a continuous communications capability. In addition to providing uninterruptable power, Alteryg's Freedom Power Systems provide long runtimes, a small footprint, low weight, long life, low maintenance, low noise, all features critical to telecommunication applications, as well as the lowest up front capital cost and lowest total cost of ownership of any solution.

"Alteryg continues to deliver on the promise of fuel cells. We have demonstrated the reliability of our Freedom Power Systems by exceeding 15 million hours of actual field operation, and demonstrated the ability of these systems to cost effectively replace incumbent solutions. Unlike competitors, who claim field deployment time as operational time, Alteryg reports actual field operating hours. Competitors continue to only dream of these accomplishments," says Alteryg CEO Eric Mettler.
